

ROBERTS
WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY

NORTHEASTERN SEMINARY

Assistant or Associate Professor of New Testament Studies

The School of Theology and Northeastern Seminary at Roberts Wesleyan University invites applications for a tenure-track faculty position in New Testament Studies. While primary competence should be in the New Testament (including second temple Judaism), applicants should be able to teach in both testaments as needed. Applicants should be committed to a vocation of teaching and scholarship on behalf of the church and have demonstrated competence or promise in both classroom and online instruction. Additionally, the candidates should be able to relate well to undergraduate population, as the position consists of teaching on the associate and baccalaureate level, including teaching the Bible as part of general education. A PhD or comparable degree in biblical studies is expected though outstanding late-stage ABD applications will be considered. Rank will be commensurate with qualifications and experience.

Starting salary is in the range of $50,000–63,000/annually.

The School of Theology and Northeastern Seminary especially encourages applications from persons who would bring diversity to the faculty. Application materials, including a letter of interest, curriculum vitae, and evaluations of teaching (if available), should be submitted electronically by December 15, 2024 to Dr. Josef Sykora, the dean of the school, at ntfacultysearch@roberts.edu. Three confidential letters of recommendation should also be submitted electronically or mailed to the dean at Roberts Wesleyan University, Attn: Northeastern Seminary, 2301 Westside Drive, Rochester, NY 14624. www.nes.edu.

Roberts Wesleyan University complies with all applicable non-discrimination laws and is committed to the enhancement of human dignity and workplace diversity.
